TERRIBLE TRUTH IS UNDERSTATED

F. Marion Crawford Tells Of Horrors Attending Messina's Destruction

By F. Marion Crawford.

Sant Aguello De Serrento, Italy, Jan -Messina has been completely des troyed, and it is doubtful whether even ne in a hundred of the population ex

At every step in the investigations find that the official messages great understated the terrible truth.

The shock which destroyed the city was felt at 5:20 n, m. December 25 i Naples and its neighborhood, but the first news of the disaster did not reach the southern capital sutil that even ing, so completely and instantly was

A torpedo boat which was unde team had escaped the vast destruc tion of the first tidal wave, and run ning many miles up the coast of Calabria-where village after village al ready lay in ruins-succeeded at las in sending the first message northward. The rest of this story is known how a whole fleet of steamers, large and small, soon gathered in the fatal waters, the very first on the spot having been two Russian men of war that were lying at Augusta, between Cata pla and Syracuse.

By this time the city of Messina, with its 150,000 inhabitants, had already lain in total rules 26 hours.

Gas mains had burst and taken fire torrential rain was falling steadily upon the remains of the burning city eneath which (it is not too much to till alive, were imprisoned and in

Men and women, half idlotle with right or maddened with hunder and thirst, were rushing atout crying out $75 per ton. for food,

Whenever a boat approached the wrecked waterfront, wild faced, stary ing creatures in bloodstained raga waded out stretching forth their hands and crying "Bread, bread!"

By some evil miracie the prigoners in the jail escaped alive. They were considerable in number and instantly in the first confusion the thieves of all near parts of Sicily made a rush for Messina, but within a few hours a FORT AND MERCHANT STS. cordon of troops and bluejackets was established with orders to shoot every aspicious character who tried to pass the lines going in or out,

It has been literally impossible to count the dead, and the bodies that have been extracted from the wreck, In the first attempt at saving life bodies were positively torn to piecesheads, arms, feet and hands lay scatered among broken masonry.

A band of half maddened men and omen fell upon a volunteer rescuer rriving from Naples, and the wild reatures, streaming with blood, made furious attempt to wrench a bag from his hand.

Not far off in a small camp with five or six tents were a hundred infantrymen. Their uniforms were almost in The officer in charge, who had been ordered to protect all valuables sums of me shaking from exhaustion confessed that for three days he and his men had fed on cabbage boiled in sea
